Looking 'em Over

The Bears didn't start as the Bears nor did they first play at Wrigley Field. No, the "ancestors" of the current world champions were known as the Staley's of Decatur, Ill., being organized in 1920 by George Halas.

Fresh out of the University of Illinois with a fine athletic background, Halas accepted the post as recreational director at the Staley manufacturing company and suggested that a football team would tie in nicely with the general program and at the same time be of advertising value.

Given the "go ahead" he did his own scouting for material and recruited twenty-three players who, by the standard of that day, were a formidable outfit. George played end and coached and induced Andy Lotshaw to assume the role of trainer.

The squad was soon reduced to fourteen and the roster read: Chamberlain, Nebraska, end; Ingwersen, Illinois and Blacklock, Michigan State, tackles; Jones, Notre Dame and Petty, Illinois, guards; Trafton, Notre Dame and Mintum, Decatur, centers, and Sternaman and Lanum, Illinois, Kohler, Northwestern, Pearce, Pennsylvania, Dressen, Decatur and Conzelman, St. Louis U, backs.

Then came that eventful date, Sept. 16, 1921 when sixteen men, including Halas, gathered in Canton, Ohio, at the instance of Jim Thorpe, and draped upon running boards in the Hay Automobile Agency, formed the American Professional Football Association.

Halas transferred his club to Wrigley Field but retained the Staley trade-mark until 1922.

The first year of the circuit saw the team beaten only once 7 to 6 by another Chicago club, the Cardinals. Four days later the "Staley's" got revenge, winning 10 to 0. It was the beginning of the oldest rivalry in the post-graduate field.

Akron, the Buffalo All-Americans, Akron Indians, Canton Bulldogs and Philadelphia Quakers were among championship claimants and the Halas tribe battled the former to a scoreless tie before 11,000 people, a new attendance record.

However, the struggle for recognition as big league stuff in Chicago was a long, hard and at times a desperate one. The newspapers were somewhat apathetic until Red Grange attached his name to a Bear contract late in the 1925 season at an unheard of stipend.

When he moved to Wrigley Field, Halas made his halfback Sternaman, a partner and he shared the coaching duties until the 1930 season when Ralph Jones took over the reins.

Halas again took over in 1933, Sternaman selling out his stock in 1932. Laurie Walquist, who had played eleven years in the backfield, and Grange were appointed assistant coaches.

George retired as an active player in 1929 but Trafton of the original cast, went on to hang up the club record of thirteen years of service, which appears likely to stand for a long time. George Musso, now in his tenth campaign, is one of the very few to continue for a decade.

Walquist retired after the 1934 season and Luke Johnsos who came to the club in 1928 as an end, was named to replace him. The Halas-Grange-Johnsos combination constituted the board of strategy through the 1939 schedule. The next year Hartley "Hunk" Anderson, who played guard in 1922 and Carl Brumbaugh, quarterback 1932-6, were made assistant coaches. Last season Brumbaugh retired, Johnsos returned and John "Paddy" Driscoll was added. The latter was in the Cardinal backfield for six years, beginning in 1920, and with the Bears for two.

The record of the Bears is impressive. They won the title in 1921-32-33-40-41, finished in second place eight times and third place three times. Only once were they in the second division, ninth in 1929 with twelve clubs in the circuit.

Bear Facts

Fourteen members of the squad of thirty-three are playing their first campaign with the club. . . . George Musso, in his tenth season is the "daddy." It's the seventh term for Ray Nolting, Danny Fortmann and Joe Stydahar and the sixth for George Wilson. . . . Nick Kerasiotis and Stuart Clarkson were born on the Fourth of July. . . . Clinton Wager was turned down by the Army for being over the height limit. He stands 6 feet, 6¼ inches and the fraction was that much over the regulation. He is known as "Stoop." . . . The line averages about 216 pounds and the backs 190. The average age is 24 years, 8 months. . . . In the poll, Lana Turner drew four votes as the most popular movie actress and Bob Hope and Jack Benny received three each as the favorite radio program. . . . Sid Luckman's 68 completed forward passes went for 1,181 yards last year, an average gain of 17 yards. . . . George McAfee's average gain by rushing of 7.3 yards was high in the circuit for 1941

and his 70-yard dash for a touchdown against the Cardinals, December 7, was the longest. . . . Dick Plasman led the club in pass catching, nabbing 14 for 283 yards. . . . Homer Cole, trainer, is in military service. . . . Steak is by long odds the favorite food, but Wager and Fortmann list ice cream, which is also Luckman's weakness. Bill Osmanski relishes cabbage soup. . . . The lifetime record, all games included, is 257 won, 76 lost and 17 tied. . . . For the eighth year the club made the St. John's Military Academy, Delafield, Wis., the training camp. . . . Bob Snyder joined four other former Bears, Manders, Master-son, Brumbaugh and Manske, as an assistant college coach. He's at Notre Dame. . . . Fortmann was named on the all-league team, picked by the scribes. It was the fourth consecutive time he was so honored. Joe Stydahr was named four times, beginning in 1937. . . . Len Akin lists eating as his hobby and Wager insists that studying the T formation is his favorite pastime. . . . The club supplies all equipment with the exception of shoes. . . . Movies are taken of all games and studied extensively. . . . McAfee's total yards from scrimmage last year, 474, was high for the club and second for the league. Norman Standlee's 414 yards was fourth. Osmanski was third for the team with 361 and eighth in league ranking. Hugh Gallarneau's 304 yards placed him twelfth. . . . Luckman attempted 119 forward passes and only 6 were intercepted. . . . When the season opened the Green Bay Packers was the only club to have a fairly even lifetime record against the Bears, the score reading Bears 23, Packers 19, with four ties since their initial battle in 1921. Total points, Bears 498, Packers 436. . . . None of the current roster have played on other National league teams. . . . In addition to letters for baseball and football at Stanford, Gallarneau earned citations for boxing and rugby. . . . Stydahr spent last summer at the University of Maryland. Fortmann was an interne in the Harper hospital, Detroit. Bob Nowaskey worked in a defense plant in Cleveland. Clyde Turner was a cattle buyer in Sweetwater, Texas. John Siegal and Osmanski continued dentistry classes in Chicago. Gary Famiglietti toiled as a mechanic in Chicago. Harry Clark was a safety engineer for a plant in Morgantown, W. Va. Ed Kolman went to school. Al Hoptowit was an iron-worker in Newark, N. J. Bill Hempel labored in a defense plant in Chicago. Nick Kerasiotis did personnel work for a Chicago firm. Charles Drulis was a steel mill foreman in Philadelphia. Len Akin was a cost accountant in Houston. Stuart Clarkson was in a parts warehouse at Kingsville, Texas. Francis Maznicki played baseball in Bath, Me. Bill Geyer was business manager of a Bloomfield, Pa., glass company. Adolph Kissell was on the Nantasket, Mass., beach. Nolting presided over his grill in Cincinnati, Luckman kept an eye on his trucking business in Brooklyn, and George Wilson was a salesman for a Chicago firm. . . . Kolman plays the violin as does Clark. Ray Bray can slide the trombone, Ray McLean plays the flute and Turner several stringed instruments. Famiglietti lists his musical accomplishments as limited to playing the victrola. . . . Brooklyn, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia have never defeated the Bears. The Eagles got a 3 to 3 tie in the first meeting in 1933 and the Dodgers a scoreless tie in the initial game in 1929.
